Desch also affirmed that Iridium NEXT continues to be on track.

"In the four months since we announced Thales Alenia Space as our prime contractor, they have met the milestones agreed upon for this first phase of the project, and we are off to an excellent start," Desch said. "Our requirements development process is well underway. Planning and design for the satellites and constellation are on schedule. Both our teams and roster of partners are growing quickly. On the overall Iridium NEXT program, we expect to spend approximately $600 million by the end of 2011. Of this spend, approximately $400 million will be funded under the Facility."

In addition, Desch commented on current operations.

"Our business continues to perform very well across the board, with continued strong growth in subscribers, service and equipment revenues, and Operational EBITDA," Desch said.
